Training Topics (We've included them all so you don't need to choose!)

The ABCs of Professionalism (2 Hours)

This interactive workshop is designed to introduce strategies for promoting professional behaviors and skills in an early childhood environment. Discussions will focus on the NAEYC Code of Ethical conduct and three building blocks for professionalism which include: positive communication, ethical decision-making skills and quality professional development plans. Attendees will participate in goal-setting activities to encourage professional growth and renew their commitment to the early childhood profession.

Pointers for Successful Parent-Teacher Conferences (1 Hour)

One of the greatest strategies for engaging families in their child's education is through two-way communication between the home and school. Active participants in this session will discover 3 components of successful parent-teacher conferences and creative ideas to maximize this important meeting. Participants will learn to apply active listening skills, the compliment sandwich and other communication tips to promote successful conferences with young learners in mind.

Ready, Set, Breathe (1 Hour)

Early childhood professionals have an awesome responsibility taking care of young children and often find it challenging to take care of themselves. In this session, participants will explore 4 dimensions of personal renewal and wellness. Successful learners will identify a variety of stress management techniques and will develop self-renewal plans to promote productivity in the classroom. The takeaways from this session include healthy nutrition tips, physical exercises and mindfulness moments that will encourage professionals to breathe while caring for young children.

Families & Schools: Teaming for Student Success (1 Hour)

This interactive session provides an overview of research highlighting 5 keys to family involvement in early childhood. Participants will discover a variety of tools and best practices for building meaningful home-school partnerships and promoting a positive school climate for all families. Early childhood professionals will receive a wealth of strategies and innovative ideas for actively engaging families in the teaching and learning process. Attendees will also explore creative ways to strengthen relationships with families and open pathways to student success in the early years.
